

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for presenting interactive entertainment where consequences of decisions made interactively by a user during the course of the interactive entertainment may later be reflected at any point in the interactive entertainment after which the decision was made. The content and sequence of the interactive entertainment may also vary by user decisions while maintaining a storyline through the use of sets of alternative scenes.